

Tony Andenoro's Bio

Originally hailing from Cleveland, OH, I am currently serving as an Assistant Professor for the Department of Organizational Leadership at Gonzaga University. My career has yielded opportunities to hold academic and student affairs positions at various universities including Fort Hays State University, Texas A&M University, John Carroll University, Prairie View A&M University, and Coastal Carolina University. My educational backgrounds includes earning a BA in Communication from the University of Toledo, a MS in Educational Administration from Texas A&M University, and a PhD in Agricultural Education from Texas A&M University. I have been a contributing member of ALE for 7 years and serve as the co-editor of the Journal of Business and Leadership.

My research interests include the development of creativity and intelligence in leadership, the connection between of critical thinking and emotional intelligence, the enhancement of critical thinking skill and disposition and written effectiveness through innovations in leadership education, and the globalization leadership curricula.

I am interested in the Director of Resource Development position, because I am passionate about assisting in the selection of a site that will be beneficial as we attempt to promote scholarship and applied leadership at our annual conference. I would also like to see the position expanded to aid in the development of educational and financial resources to supplement ALE and its leadership efforts.
